

Diablo Water District is committed to considering the interests of all stakeholders and interested parties in the development and implementation of a groundwater sustainability agency and the development and implementation of a groundwater sustainability plan. Specifically, the District will seek input from, provide opportunities to comment to and ultimately consider the comments and interests of domestic and agricultural holders of overlying groundwater rights, representatives of public water supply systems, local land use planning agencies, environmental users of groundwater or their representatives, any users of surface waters connected to groundwater, the federal government, Native American tribes, disadvantaged communities and groundwater monitoring entities. This will be accomplished through public notices and publicly posted agendas for all meetings, opportunity for public comment and input at all meetings or in writing, and the maintenance and updating of the following list of interested parties and stakeholders.
